By some traditions, a yearbook is a gift, from those who make it to those who appreciate it. To make Halcyon '97 a book that would be more meaningful to those people who value it, we decided that what appears on these pages would be what the community submitted to us. We began this project by asking what sort of theme this book should have, earning us the following response from a member of the Class of 1997:

This ... is a suggestion for the '97 edition. I think that the book should contain a lot of pictures of me. I know a lot of the different people on campus and feel that I am someone that people would enjoy seeing on every page, or at least every other page, of the book that they will treasure for a lifetime. I can help you by supplying pictures of myself with various people in various positions in various places in the Swat compound. I have drunk pictures, sober pictures, pictures for a "through the years" retrospective of how my hair style changed and how I grew up "through my years" in Willets and Worth. I can even use Europe as a backdrop to promote study abroad and as a prelude to the expanding of horizons that will occur as people graduate from Swat. Basically, I am a role model and mascot, if you will, of my class and as such I volunteer to be exploited for the good of my school. I'm magnanimous, I know. Let me know when I should stop by with the pictures. In anticipation of this I have already begun sorting through them and have narrowed it down to 213 pictures. I'm up to Sophomore year- right on target. I'll be by soon to drop them off. ...

And so we had to think up a theme quickly before they could make their way over. But in hindsight, we think you'll agree the decision was a good one, and the theme of particular relevance to us all. And so we present —

Halcyon '97. A Work In Progress.

I was talking to my mom about how Andrew and I threw a "study break that will get on your nerves." It was the week before Spring Break '97, and people seemed to be tired and on-edge—at least I was. At the study break, I told her, my hallmates made a game of venting what really ticked us off, e.g., people who butter their bread at the condiment bar. And my mom responds: "Oh, I misunderstood. I thought a 'study break' was when you'd get together with some people to study."

"People often ask me what's the best thing about Swarthmore. You can always tell them that the education is great, the people are awesome, the stress is huge. For me, I love my small circle of friends. I am proud of my choice to have majored in Linguistics. I met the love my life, Rachel Sullivan. However, the best thing about Swarthmore is the fact that I got through it. I finished it, and no one can take that from me. It's a good feeling!"

I remember rolling down Parrish lawn with Pia on a dreary night, freshman year. I remember Pat chasing me through Willets with Ben's dead turtle. I remember sneaking into Jerahme and Kerry's room to eat all of their goodies. I remember Crazy Charlie. I remember our Melrose parties in Kyle's room. I remember our road trip to Florida. I remember falling in the mud when trying to avoid the flooded tunnel on the way to the gym. I remember being homesick. I remember numerous sleep-overs with George and Ben in our room, sophomore year. I remember beating Haverford. I remember late-night trips to Denny's with Nina and J. I remember coming home late and ordering white pizza. I remember endless conversations about Bermuda, self-confidence, and art in our common room with the Christmas lights on I remember Ben and Franklin writing papers all night in their stinky study-room. I remember going to a rugby game and marveling at all the strange sights. I remember Jerahme's endless family. I remember tromping through the Crum. I remember sharing my art studio with Dave. I remember Kira always forgetting her sweatshirt in the gym. I remember the winds in the fall, the ice in the winter, and the daffodils and tulips that appear in spring. I remember...

Swarthmore College.

Anywhere else....

I'd be ugly.

I'd be smart.

I wouldn't have to beg for a formal date.

It would have been an A.

It wouldn't be an issue.

I wouldn't have made it to a varsity team.

I'd get laid.

We wouldn't have classes during states of emergency.

My daily beer intake would be higher than my GPA.

A trip to the mall wouldn't be called going out.

My books wouldn't cost as much as my tuition.

Having a debate wouldn't be the highlight of the day.

There wouldn't be construction... always.

An "all-nighter" wouldn't be for work.

Organizations

Cultural Groups

Each person is individual. Different interests, varying tastes, opposing viewpoints, and unique personalities mark the character of a person. Though important, these guides to an individual style are changeable. But the foundation upon which they rest, cultural and ethnic background, is the rock upon which each person builds his life. Various groups on campus celebrate this basis of the individual.

Publications and Academics

Words and ideas are two of the most powerful weapons known to man. With them one can influence people and instigate change on any level, from one person to a teeming mass. The academic environment of Swarthmore is rich with ideas, both written and discussed. Journalism, debate, and exploring fields of interest outside of the normal four- or five-class schedule are vital for accomplishing not just a scholarly education, but a worldly one.

Political and Social Groups

Students like to be active. Whether it is campaigning for one's favorite candidate or going to a party, it is rare that a Swarthmore student can be found with no desire to do anything. Political and social organizations on campus offer a wide variety of activities to exercise the mind as well as entertain the imagination, and it is through these groups that students reach out into the community and at the same time reach within themselves.

Religious Groups

There is great power in faith, and various organizations on campus work towards helping students practice their religion. As fundamental as ethnicity and culture, religion is for many a tie to a way of life that they have known since childhood. Groups on campus are involved in creating supportive environments, bringing the traditions of the home to the Swarthmore community. The diversity of these groups offers students help in finding spiritual guidance that is best for them.

A Capella Groups

The ability to sing well is a gift, and Swarthmore's a capella groups are testimony to the excellent talent on our campus. Hardly a few weeks can pass without a performance in the Performing Arts Center, Meetinghouse, or Intercultural Center, and these performances attract crowds. A capella music has a fun and creative style that is, in both the music and its creation, one-hundred percent human.

Athletics

Due to the voluntary and free-spirited nature of independent student-run athletic teams, Swarthmore boasts a healthy contingent that dedicates its time to making club athletics successful. Organized athletics also prosper at the college-sanctioned varsity level. Many students turn to sports to provide a great outlet for pent-up stresses and an agreeable team atmosphere.

Pacific Rim Organization (PRO)

The Pacific Rim Organization is a relatively new Student Council chartered organization open to all students who may be interested in Asian issues, culture, or language. It brings prominent speakers to campus for lectures and also informally hosts both students and faculty members to speak on more specific topics at small dinner and club meetings. While these talks are usually within the domain of Asian issues, they often spill over into the range of history and culture to complement the cultural events that the club holds as well. In addition, the club sponsors student-run Asian language courses, one of which, Japanese, can be taken for course credit.

Several years ago, when a group of frosh interested in the sciences learned that there was no publication on the campus devoted exclusively to the sciences, we decided, in true Swarthmore tradition, to create our own. And so began Matrix.

Our purpose is to inform the college community about current occurrences in science and to teach and to entertain. The science departments are fundamental constituents of the college. We feel that our publication not only gives complete coverage to these departments—which have received limited attention in the past—but that it also helps the community to realize that scientific concepts are not always abstract or unintelligible to the lay person, nor that they are merely filled with incomprehensible lingo. There are sections for each of the science departments: Biology, Chemistry, Computer Science, Engineering, Physics/Astronomy, Mathematics and the newly-created Social Sciences. These sections cover topics such as new faculty and classes and student and faculty research. Among the other components of the magazine are editorials and op-eds on issues such as bioethics and feature articles on matters such as how to go about finding the right internship or how to apply to graduate school.

While we hope that Matrix will be especially useful for science majors and department members, our goal is for the magazine to be of interest to all members of the college community. Though all information may not be strictly presented in “layman’s terms,” concepts are understandable, and particularly difficult ideas are defined or explained, so that everyone will be able to enjoy the magazine.

Thanks to the support of the science departments, Sigma Xi, and the Bios Club, our first issue was published in the Spring of 1996. The response was overwhelmingly positive from students and faculty alike, and we hope to expand the magazine’s design in order to continue to inform and educate the college community.

The Phoenix

A Typical Thursday Night

Aarti is sitting in the office, exactly at 7p.m. (seeing as she lives next door), drinking her Mountain Dew. Mandara walks in, and Aarti politely offers her a drink--not just any drink, but fluorescent yellow oil. Aarti says: "I couldn't find dinner mints," but then Kirstin walks in with two bags! Lyndy and Tobie walk in (that's Tobie, not Toki--she comes later) and begin working. Tobie complains about Aarti's addicting, disgusting food and the conversation turns to the good old days when Erik would bring us Mama Huneke's German cookies.

Toki strolls in with reporter's pad in hand, and begins calling sources. Aarti wants to know where Arun is. The Hunts come in to liven things up and remind everyone for the gazillionth time about the importance of photo request sheets. In fact, for those who feel that they do not have an adequate understanding of the concept, they will offer an intensive eight-hour seminar.

Patrick and Jessica show up, followed by Sam, who announces that the student publications office is now off-limits to The Phoenix on Thursday nights. Patrick says "OK" and scurries to the hall to work on his page by hand, but not before asking the tyrants if it is okay for him to do so.

Arun shows up in his red flannel pajamas, sits down next to Patrick and says, "You know, if you really tried, you could get 40 columns on that page."

While the rest of the staff is trying to figure out how to deal with the recently issued decree, Erik shows up with some nifty little vanilla cookies and cheers everyone up. He then proceeds to plead with Sam to let the staff use the computer again. Sam is then distracted by Sarah, who walks in and begins to talk to him about marriages and relationships which transcend ideological boundaries. Elizabeth comes in complaining about her health and proceeds to scan Erik. Jessica comes back from cheerleading and demands to know how she is supposed to fit a scan of Erik on a five column page. Arun offers to adjust the number of columns to compensate. Ian, bored with Scotland, decides to fly back to live up his reputation as "more movie reviewer that any movie reviewer we've ever met." Instead of helping Jessica with the dilemma,

Fall Staff

Phoenix staff members have different ways of coping after a long night in the office. Ian tries to gouge his eye out (if they're sleepy, they're comin' out), Sam inhales 12 big cups of coffee, while Erica and Tony prefer waking up naturally.

Ian decides to play and starts to rearrange and resize the boxes on her page. The phone rings, and miraculously Jane walks in and answers it, in her exquisite phone voice. While talking on the phone, Erica and Tony wander in to check on everyone. Erica immediately pulls Arun into the paste-up room to discuss layout tips via the retrospect. Tony asks if there have been any recent broadcasts from Bryn Mawr for a man who will never be a client of the Hair Club for Men.

As it is now late at night, Fred, the illustrious Night Editor, begins looking over people's shoulders, declaring "I only know what looks weird." Jen walks into the office, grabs a computer, talks with ten and five minutes later, Aarti and Kirstin bring the paper down to Ben West.

Ian gives himself a big hug for being more movie reviewer than any movie reviewer we've ever had.

Unflappable Tobie takes a breather from the rest of her life to bask in the glory that only Phoenix editorship can provide.

Knit-Wits

Dear family,

I am glad that I am finally able to write a happy letter to you-one that will make you see that I made the right decision in going so far away from home to Swarthmore College. It is true that the first few weeks of school I was so homesick. I cried all through orientation, I dreamed of my bed at home, the food we have in our kitchen cupboard, the washing machine that didn't take quarters.

I think I am now over all of that silly sadness and I can trace my new comfort to a very definite event. I joined a new club here at school, a club in which I can find all of the comfort I left behind: cool people, comfortable chairs, appropriate conversation, and really soft wool. I can go there every week to relax and work on my mittens.

Basically, I wanted to tell you all that I no longer need you. I am grown up now and I have the knitting club to take care of me. If you want to see me come by one of our meetings - 4:15 Thursday in Parrish Parlours.

Thanks for being so understanding,
your daughter and sibling,

Religious Groups

Caritas

Caritas (which means love and charity) is a non-denominational group of seekers rooted in the Christian tradition who support one another in worship, reflection, and spiritual growth. Caritas strives to create a safe space where questions are welcome and individual differences in faith are respected. Meetings are held in the new Worship Room in Bond Hall on Sundays at 4:00 p.m. These programs are led by students who sign up to present a topic or question of spiritual interest. Meeting time is spent in discussion, singing, and silent and spoken prayer. Meetings are followed by dinner together in Sharples Dining Hall. The 1996-97 Caritas year kicked off with the Fall Retreat at Willistown Meeting House on September 21. The theme was "A Time for Every Purpose" (Ecclesiastes 3:1-8), and the group enjoyed singing, discussing Scripture, meditative walks through the countryside, and homemade meals together. Late fall featured apple picking at nearby Indian Orchards, a sleepover in the new Caritas lounge, participation in the interfaith service of Thanksgiving, an Advent evening of ecumenical Taize chants with the Catholic Community, and a festive Christmas dinner.

The first event of the spring semester was Credo, featuring Professor Tyrene White of the Political Science Department. Credo, Latin for "I believe," is an opportunity for students to hear the spiritual journeys of faculty and staff over dinner in Sharples. The Lenten season included a Parable discussion and the first gathering for Simple Meal, where Caritas members shared soup, bread and water. Lent continued with a series of discussions with local ministers, and culminated in a campus-wide Easter service in the Friends Meeting House. For the Spring Retreat, the group returned to Willistown. The year ended on a musical note, with the annual all-campus Sing-Along with Peter Blood and Annie Patterson, editors of the songbook Rise Up Singing.

Ruach

Ruach, meaning "wind" or "spirit" in Hebrew, is the Jewish students' group on campus. Sponsoring weekly student-led Shabbat services and home-cooked kosher dinners, holiday services and celebrations, speakers, performances, study breaks and cultural events, Ruach serves as the center for Jewish life at Swarthmore and also promotes awareness of Jewish issues on campus. Ruach's membership grew tremendously this year, sometimes overflowing their space in Lodge 5. The resulting expanded activities included visits from Penn and Yale a cappella groups and the first-ever Swarthmore Passover seder, as well as the popular semi-annual bagel brunches and bring-a-friend Shabbats.

Shana Stein and Aviva Arad lead the 1997 Tu b'Shevat seder, in celebration of the beginning signs of Spring. Participants tasted more than ten different fruits and recited traditional blessings.

Swarthmore Christian Fellowship

It was a dark night in winter...a bunch of frosh gathered in a basement room to hang out and chat with each other...and all of a sudden, the lights turn off and in bound some yelling upperclassmen, who (unsuccessfully) kidnap them. What's going on, you ask? It's the traditional kidnapping of the frosh in the Roots Bible Study, at the end of Fall semester, by the upperclassmen in the Swarthmore Christian Fellowship. The frosh were taken to Staffworker Young Choi's apartment, where they had a fun gathering with good food and friendship.

The Swarthmore Christian Fellowship had a full and busy year in '96-'97.

The vision for the Fall semester was "That Christ might have first place in everything," and the members of the Fellowship studied the book of Colossians in Small Group Bible Studies and at Friday Night Worship meetings. Other events in the Fall semester included Fall Retreat, the Freshman Banquet on the night of Fall Formal, and Open House held in Parrish Parlors.

During the Winter break, seven members of the Fellowship attended a missions conference at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign called Urbana '96. At this conference, they bonded together at Craig Snoeyink '97's house, and gathered with 20,000 other students from around the world to learn more about world missions.

The Spring semester's vision was "To reach the campus through unity in Christ." To this end, the Fellowship studied the book of Philippians in Small Group Bible Studies, and the book of Ephesians at Friday Night Worship. They also held a Sunday night dinner discussion about what Christ had to say about ethnicity in the Bible, and how that applied to Swarthmore and the Christians here. Other events included a Tri-Co Fellowship retreat at the Blue Church, and Chapter Camp, held after finals at Lake Champion in upstate New York.

Members of the fellowship gather in C-lot for a surprise birthday party for Kevin Koo '97.

Some SCFers attended a missions conference over winter break called Urbana '96, but not without some mishaps.

A Capella Groups

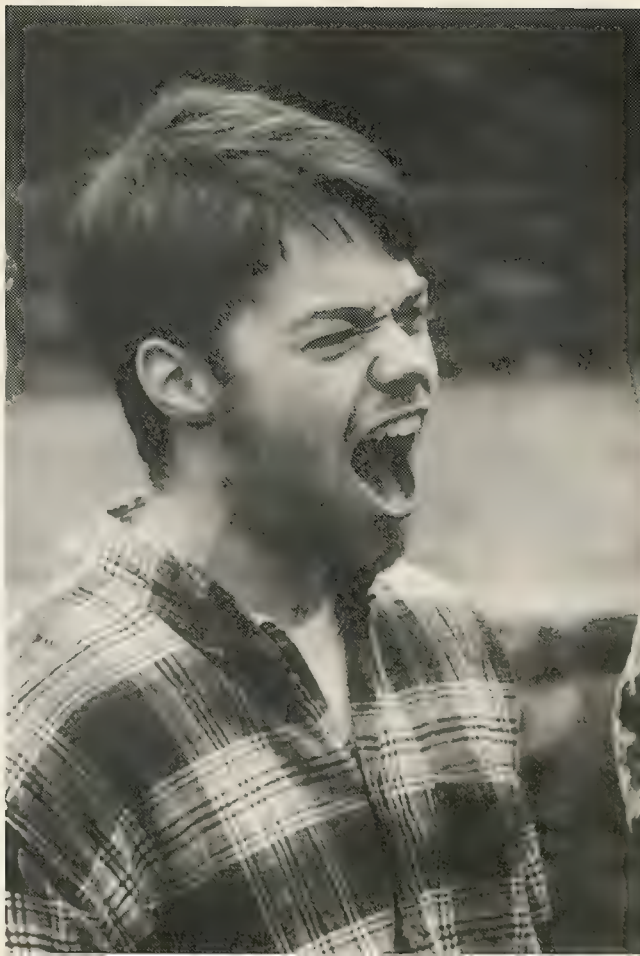

Having gained six new members since the end of last year, Sixteen Feet, Swarthmore's all male a cappella double quartet, had a lot of music to learn. They spent much of the fall rebuilding their repertoire but also came out with four new songs for the Fall Jamboree. This spring saw "The Feet" with a packed performance schedule including a successful tour over break and a number of smaller gigs both on and off campus. They hosted such groups as the Vassar Night Owls, Stanford's Fleet Street Singers, the Oberlin Obertones, and the University Of Illinois Xtension Chords, but the biggest event by far was a reunion concert celebrating the 16th anniversary since the group's formation in 1981.

On a side note, Peter Schickele, distinguished musicologist and Swarthmore alumnus (class of '57), was inducted as an honorary member of Sixteen Feet on December 27, 1996.

The True Meaning of Psalters

Psalters has now been in existence for five years; we were founded in the fall of 1992. Technically, we are a Christian a cappella group. We get together and sing Christian music. We sing at churches and at Christian-oriented events, (though we sing in secular settings as well), several times every semester. Our music reflects Christian doctrine in one way or another. At first glance, we look a lot like an a cappella group that happens to sing Christian music: we hold auditions for new members, we warm up and fret about our voices, we pick music that we hope will interest and hold an audience. The Swarthmore campus sees us, by and large, as a singing group with a few extra quirks.

We, however, try not to see ourselves that way. Our first and highest objective as a group is to spread, by word and example, the good news of Christ: to preach that he lived on earth, died for our sins, and rose again to bring us to new life in him. Our commitment is not to performing catchy or entertaining or even beautiful music, but to proclaiming that message in the most effective way possible. We guard, therefore, against excessive choreography and anything else that might distract from the words that we sing, and we choose songs that we feel tell the truth about Christ in a way that will make people listen.

Our name, Psalters, is a pun. A psalter is an old English word for a book of hymns--and on the one hand we do see ourselves that way, as a repository for Christian music and a space for singing it. But in Matthew 5:13, Jesus says to those who are following him "You are the salt of the earth," commanding them not only to follow the Law but to be examples to others. As such, we strive not only to sing about Christ, but to show in our lives that we believe in Christ's teaching; Jesus goes on to say, in Matthew 5:16, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and give glory to your Father who is in heaven."

This year, Psalters performed at the Fall and Spring Jamborees and did a few off-campus concerts as well. We also sang at the Gospel Jam, a gathering of Christian a cappella groups which was held this year at Penn State.

Colossians 3:16: Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly, teach and admonish one another in all wisdom, and sing psalms and hymns and spiritual songs with thankfulness in your hearts to God.

The folkdance club is dedicated to keeping alive dancing traditions from around the world through a fun, social atmosphere. In an effort to spread the knowledge of folk dances from Romania, Israel, Macedonia, Scotland, Canada, England and many other countries including the United States, teachers come in to instruct students on how to perform the dances and play the music which causes people's feet to move to the beat. It has become a very popular club that has traditions in which the Swarthmore community and the local dancing community participate. One such event, which draws dancers from up and down the East coast and even from California, is the annual English-Scottish ball, started about twenty-seven years ago by Swarthmore alum, Geoffery Selling. Another annual event is a demonstration held on Sharples patio for Parent's weekend. It includes the traditional Maypole dance and is always fun for all because of enthusiastic audience participation. Due to the passion of the students for the dancing and the involvement of the local dancing communities, the folk dance club promises to provide enjoyment for Swarthmoreans for years to come.

Motherpuckers enjoyed another great season of hockey this year. Led by a group of dedicated seniors and honchos, every Thursday night between fall and spring breaks was a great time for all. With the end of its 27th year, 'Puckers looks forward to the future.

Street Hockey

“He shoots, he scooooooooores!”

The Street Hockey Club, founded in 1995 by Peter Prinz and Tony Cheesebrough, has given Swarthmore College its first look at street hockey. Its members are students at the College in all four years. Starting with only five players, the Club has since grown to roughly thirty players in size. Players come to the Lamb Miller Field House twice a week to participate in some good, clean, fun hockey. While the Club began with Student Council funding in 1995, in 1996 the Intramural Program has taken the Street Hockey Club under its wing to foster further growth in attendance and popularity.

Women's Rugby

There have been years when the women's rugby team has been large in numbers or large in size, but this year's team was large in spirit. Although the team's record was not outstanding, the team fielded the strongest side possible for each match. Captains Hanan Hussein '97 and Andrea Barnett '97 led the women ruggers as they faced many tough opponents in the fall. Despite the challenge posed by many of the teams they played, they never stopped playing to their fullest ability in any of the matches.

The team also reached an unparalleled level of closeness. From the first meeting to the last game, these women supported each other's efforts on and off the field. The season culminated in an awards banquet which was unforgettable. With ten of twenty-two players being seniors, next year will probably be for rebuilding, but there is plenty of talent to lead the team into the twenty-first century.

Varsity Sports

♦ Breaking New Grounds ♦

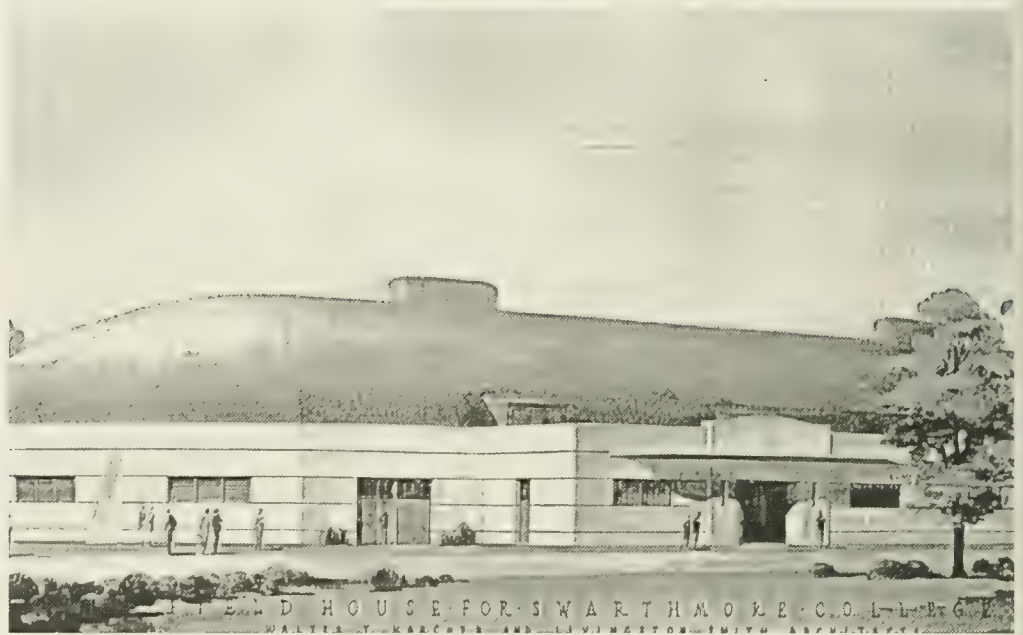

Swarthmore's 1996-1997 varsity athletic season had been one of the most eventful in history. Fall sports launched into action during The Phoenix's "investigations" of "illegal" recruiting methods. Many athletes and coaches fought back against the false, uninformed accusations. Their intelligent responses made the editorial writer seem like an ass. Yes, Swat Jocks are more "Swat" than "Jock".

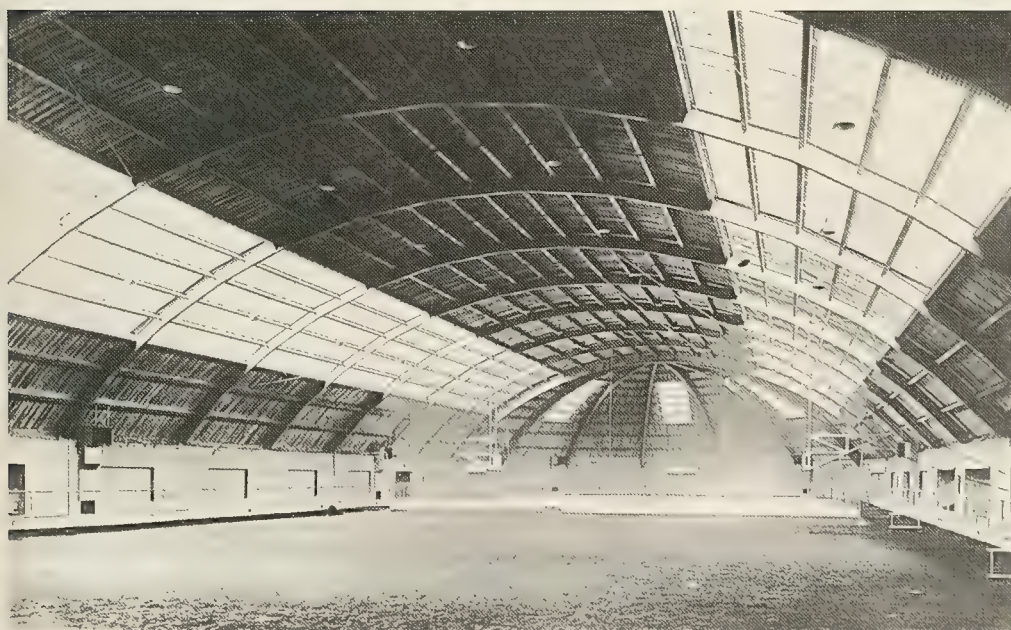

The fall teams entered many uncharted territories. First, Swarthmore was formally inducted into the Eastern Colleges Athletic Conference, which broadened the competition field for all the teams. The women's soccer team got a new coach from Brazil. The men's soccer team received an "international-flavored" training down in Florida. The volleyball team adapted to a whole new squad of young players, as their familiar leaders had graduated in 1996. The field hockey team went against the trend in more ways than one. During their second consecutive Conference Championship season. First, they abandoned the international trend that the other teams had been following in losing the British head coach and replacing him with the locally-raised Karen Borbee. Head Coach Borbee, acting as a novice in collegiate field hockey, led the team to Swarthmore's first-ever NCAA playoff run. When was the last time that the Garnet advanced to the Sweet Sixteen of NCAA playoffs in any sport? The Garnet Tide also had their taste of NCAA athletics when they travelled down to Annapolis to scrimmage against the nationally-ranked, Division I U.S. Naval Academy. The Garnet Tide could not sink the Midshipmen. Yet, the Tide performed rather admirably, considering that the JV Midshipmen had the height advantage and outweighed most of the Swat players. After a winless season, the Tide did receive some perks: Chris Fowler '97 was interviewed on ESPN.

The start of the winter swimming season was signalled by oddly shaved, dyed heads. The swimmers continued their various rituals such as the hair-do's and the "shave and taper" sessions to boost morale for meets. More importantly, they continued their winning ways to take a second place finish in the Centennial Conference. The wrestlers still followed their diets and muscle-wrangling ways. Birds flew in Tarble Pavillion with the badminton games, finishing second to arch-rival Bryn Mawr, the only team they lost to in the Conference. Singles player, Thanh Hoang '97 also came in second to the Mawrters' Lauren Krieg at the National Collegiate Championships. Women's basketball, despite their tough season under new head coach Adrienne Shibles, trounced the Mawrters in both meetings. The men's basketball team had a historical season, starting with their annual Equinox Classics Tournament. Led by school record holders, Colin Convey '97 and Ben Schall '97, this team advanced to the Centennial Conference Championships where they lost to Dickinson College. They also won a playoff bid in the ECAC tournament. The winter teams had set a solid foundation for the next season.

The spring sports teams fit into this Halcyon's theme the rather well in that most of these teams were "works-in-progress." The men's lacrosse team was composed of mostly first-year players, who could be a formidable force in the future. The softball and baseball teams experienced the same plight as the men's lacrosse team. Steve Farneth '00 might have forecasted the future of these batting sports when he pitched a no-hitter against Haverford in the last game of the season. The women's lacrosse team played solidly throughout the season, just as the tennis teams did. Track and field, the longest running team at Swarthmore, finished off their year-long engagement with an impressive showing at the Conference Championships. Head Coach Ted Dixon received the Coach of the Year honors during the women's indoor track season. 1996-1997 was definitely a ground-breaking season for Swarthmore athletics.

Badminton

◇ Bringing Home the Bacon ◇

This is probably one of the most fun varsity teams on campus because there has never been a practice where laughter was missing. Starting with Thanh's infamous 6-corners drill (it used to be 4-corners) and Erika's bacon cravings, the team who proudly play with their shuttlecocks will lose five seniors this year to graduation. The trees on campus will be safer without Cat Chomat walking into them every once in a while. Puff-We-Kick-Butt will lose its favorite babysitter, Becky Fischer. Vanya Tepavcevic and her intimidating presence will be missing to calm down the rowdy, younger players. Yo! Landa! The name says it all. Of course, the team will sorely miss Thanh the Mother Hen and her euphonious number callings. For the upcoming season, the team need to pack up their short skirts, rackets and bacon wrapped in paper napkins and kick Bryn Mawr's butt to gain the number one spot. Benis probably won't enjoy coming second again.

Top: Sharp-shooter Tim Schofield '99 jostled for position against Haverford's Chris Farrell '97 in the annual grudge match where the Garnet trounced the Fords 52-39. Right: The 1997 Garnet, the first-ever Swarthmore men's basketball team to advance to the Centennial Conference Championship game, shook hands with the Red Devils of Dickinson College who won the title on the Garnet's homecourt at Tarble Pavilion.

The 1996-97 men's basketball season was quite a "historic" one. The Garnet, led by its six seniors, began the season with high expectations. They fulfilled them heartily early on, beating Pomona-Pitzer, a team bound for the NCAA tournament, and Stevens Institute of Technology, jumping to a 2-0 record at the annual Equinox Classic. The Centennial Conference season began with a win over Johns Hopkins highlighted by senior Colin Convey's 25 points and 6 assists. A victory against Johnson & Whales at The Whaling City Ford Tournament in Connecticut marked senior center Aaron Bond's "coming out party." Bondo tallied 24 points and 16 rebounds to bring the team's record against Division III opponents to a lofty 5-1 record at the semester break.

The start of the second semester tested the team's resilience through adversity. The team lost against Pomona-Pitzer after the Garnet held an early 17 point lead. But, in the game against Occidental, A.J. Shanley '97 registered career-best 26 points and saved the team from sure defeat and their vacation in sunny California.

The Garnet's play in these games foreshadowed a stretch of "jet-lag" where the Garnet lost 5 out of 6 games, bringing the record to 6-8. Ben Schall '97 helped to right the Garnet ship with a big 21 point, 12 rebound performance against Muhlenberg in late January. The team rolled for six consecutive wins, including the 100th of Coach Lee Wimberly's career in a grudge match against conference rival Ursinus at the Palestra in Philadelphia. The Garnet once again stood tall with a 12-8 record. The senior class would present Coach Wimberly with a plaque to commemorate his historic victory on what many expected to be their final home appearance, Senior Night against Dickinson College. "Downtown" Chad Brown made the most impressive start of his career against Dickinson, but it was Schall who capped the narrow victory with a final second free-throw making the final score 64-63 also bringing him one point closer to the one-thousandth of his career. Schall finished the season with 1,060 career points.

The team proved that it had saved its best for last, during their playoff run in the final weeks of the season that included consecutive road wins over conference foes Haverford, Muhlenberg, and Johns Hopkins to earn the right to host the Centennial Conference's Championship game. This team comprised of senior strength and young talent in the likes of Tim Schofield '99, J.J. Purdy '99, and Mike Schall '99 apparently had spent all that it had to reach the Championships; the loss, unfortunately, seemed unavoidable. This team was the first-ever Swat team to advance to the finals and also the first to win an ECAC Championships bid against Lincoln University. The 1997 men's basketball team, according to Coach Wimberly, did indeed "make history."

Women's Basketball ◇ Cementing a Team ◇

The 1996-1997 team was a team of new beginnings. With only five returning players, Swarthmore's roster showed a rather young team taking the court. Under the coaching of new head coach Adrienne Shibles, Swarthmore recorded a 7-16 season.

Senior co-captains Lisl Cochran-Bond, led the team with 14.2 points per game and 1.9 assists (6rpg), and Pia Houseal, leading rebounder with 9.0 per game (9.4ppg), joined junior Michelle Walsh (6ppg, 5.6rpg), who lead the team with 48 steals for the season, as the three upperclasswomen.

Other returning players included Holly Barton '99 (8.7ppg) whose three point (38.5) and foul shot (79.2) percentages led the team. Jean Quinn '99 whose aggressive style of play as one of the conference's smaller post players made her the team's second leading rebounder with 6.2rpg, and Rachel Gutman '99. Sophomore Holly Baker joined the team for the first time and contributed an upbeat style of play. Women's basketball at Swarthmore also had a strong class of first years including Kira Cochran-Bond, Gwyn Horton, Thalia Mills, and Leslie Young. Swat women prided themselves on their strength and their aggressive defense, nationally ranked early on in their season for defense. Although a team of only eleven, these women battled their way through a lot of tough games against teams with greater depth.

The first half of the women's season started with a tip-off tournament at Drew University where Swat beat St. Elizabeth in the opening game to begin their season 1-0 and then fell to the tournament's host in the finals. Cochran-Bond and Barton were named to the All-Tournament Team. In late November, Swat traveled to Smith College for the annual Seven Sisters Tournament and was narrowly defeated in the first round by Wellsley, who went on to compete in the final game. After a victory over Bryn Mawr and a close loss to Vassar, Swat returned home to await the second half of their season. Houseal was named to the Seven Sisters All-Tournament Team.

The Garnet Women jumped out to a great start their first week back from break defeating Bryn Mawr. Their next game against Dickinson was one of the highlights where Swarthmore women defeated this team, 71-63, for the first time in Swarthmore's women's basketball history. The season quickly moved on. Another of Swarthmore's highlights was a conference win against Western Maryland, 60-59. Swarthmore finished 7-16 with some tough end of the season losses. Swarthmore women's basketball was a well-rounded team, ending with five different teammates leading in scoring and six teammates leading in rebounding at various times. Cochran-Bond finished her career having scored 714 total points, leaving her 6th on the all-time scoring list, as well as the best career foul shooter with a .674 average. Houseal finished her career with 706 total points, 7th on the all-time scoring list, and 665 rebounds, 5th on the all-time rebounding list. A strong team will return for the 1997-98 season with the loss of only two seniors. — By Pia Houseal '97

Field Hockey ◇ Winning Some Hardware ◇

On the way to winning their second Centennial Conference champions title, the Swarthmore field hockey team knocked off three nationally ranked teams, Rowan College, Ithaca College and Gettysburg. These feats earned this squad the college's first-ever NCAA Field Hockey Tournament playoff bid.

Leading the charge were seniors Lia Ernst, Erin Flather, Kristen Osborne, Samantha Peltz, Amy Small and Kelly Wilcox. After spending the night at the NCAA regulated Homestead Suites and raiding their hospitality kitchen, the Garnet unfortunately succumbed to Messiah College (0-3) in one of the heaviest rainstorms of 1996. Perhaps, the outcome was predestined.

Regardless of this showdown's results, the Garnet finished their second championship season with a -0 in the conference. These victories extended the streak to 18-0, as next year's squad hope to three-peat under second-year head coach Karen Borbee.

Men's Lacrosse ◇ Laying the Foundation ◇

The Swarthmore Men's Lacrosse team finished a rebuilding season with a record of 0-13 (0-6 in the Centennial Conference). However, this record was not indicative of the heart and play of the Garnet. The Garnet were able to earn the respect of second ranked Washington College, 11th. ranked Gettysburg, and top 25 ranked Franklin and Marshall by playing close games with all three of these opponents. The team was led by tri-captains Pete Hamilton '97, Pat Donaghy '98 and Aaron Hultgren '98. Coach Pat Gress in his second year as head coach commented that, "Our leadership was terrific this year and really set the foundation from which we hope to build up our program." An injury early in the season to senior Pete Hamilton resulted in an already young and inexperienced team to look to the future sooner than expected. The team was led offensively by Pat Donaghy who led the team with 11 goals and 7 assists. The attack consisted of Steve Shin '98 (7 pts.), Adam Dickinson '00 (7 pts.) and Toby Paterson '00 (6 pts.), and the midfield was led by Matt Halpern '98 (4 pts.) and Marcus Shin '00 (8 pts.). The defense continually kept opponents from scoring their average goal totals due to the play of goalies Ben Henwood '97 (124 saves) and Syd Rydquist '00 (58 saves). Senior Ben Henwood was voted most valuable player and received the Avery Blake Trophy for his effort in the goal. The defense was led by second team all conference defenseman Tucker Zengerle '00, Alex DeShields '98, Aaron Hultgren '98 and Nimish Dave '99. Many newcomers such as Chris Rockmore '98, Tony Buendia '98 and Mike Viola '00 and many other veteran players made tremendous strides to the future. The Garnet not only earned the respect of their opponents but also the referees as they received the Team Sportsmanship Award from the District III referees' association. The foundation set by the 1997 Men's Lacrosse team will result in a successful future for the Men's Lacrosse program. — By Aaron Hultgren '98

Women's Soccer

◇ Hammering Away ◇

1997 Team Roster: Bridget Arbour, Brenda Ayers, Claire Baxter, Anna Chirinos, Kate Doty, Laura Fanucchi, Janice Gallagher, Laird Hedlund, Lisa Hilgendorf, Anne Holland, Diana Hunt, Susan Hunt, Sarah Jaquette, Kirstin Knox, Catherine Laine, Emily Manetta, Amy Markey, Melissa Morell, Annalise Paaby, Joanna Perry, Amy Phillips, Betsy Rosenbaum, Rebecca Schmidt, Laura Starita, Anna Sugden-Newberry, Rhiana Swartz, Jen VanderVeer, Meredith Weems, Beth Wiles, Nia Wright. Head Coach Alex Ely; Assistant Coaches Pat Gress, Jerry Lebid

The women's soccer team faced an interesting rebuilding season this year. Though they only lost two starters to graduation, the team battled past failures and adjusting to a new coach for most of the season. First-year head coach Alex "you know girls, I grew up playing in the streets of Brazil" Ely was able to inspire the women to a 5-12-3 record, a vast improvement over the previous year's lone victory.

Offensively, the team was led by the tandem of center-mid fielder Kirstin Knox '99 and Sarah Jaquette '98 who led the team by their hard working example. Knox ended the season with a team high nine goals and five assists, while Jaquette chipped in five goals. As sole captain, Claire Baxter '98, did an outstanding job of always giving a 110% effort; her tough play was a continuous bright spot for the team. In addition, juniors Betsy Rosenbaum and Catherine Laine were forces to be reckoned with as they streaked down the sidelines during the team's offensive efforts. Laine was especially impressive, both for her amazing speed and for the skills she displayed in her first ever season.

Sole senior Laura Starita provided the team with much needed wisdom and guidance, along with an amazing display of never ending energy. She could always be counted on to go hard after both her player and the ball. Swat's defense was anchored by the gritty Janice Gallagher '99, who always threw everything she had into stopping her player, with great success. Also integral in Swat's defense were Diana Hunt '99, Anna Sugden-Newberry '99, Rebecca Schmidt '99, and Amy Phillips '00. The teams collected several off-season honors. Knox collected spots on both the All-Centennial Conference Honorable Mention Team and the Centennial Conference Academic Honor Roll. Joining her on the Academic Honor Roll were Janice Gallagher '99, Diana Hunt '99, Susan Hunt '99, Catherine Laine '98, Beth Wiles '98, and Laura Starita '97. The squad hopes to build on the highlights from the season and become a force to be reckoned with next year. With juniors Baxter, Rosenbaum, and Jaquette, and sophomores Knox, Gallagher, D. Hunt, S. Hunt, and Amy Markey Sugden-Newberry all returning next year along with a host of very talented freshman who unfortunately saw little playing time, the team should hopefully be able to better negotiate Head Coach Ely's quirks and become a cohesive force in the Centennial Conference next year. - Beth Wiles '98

Swimming ♦ Plowing through the Water ♦

Probably no Swat team can boast of having more team/school spirit than these water babies. Honestly, how many teams do you know of who bond over body waxing and “tapering” before major competitions? Once out of water, these swimmers who sport crazy, designer-arranged bald spots blend in well with Mother Nature’s well-endowed Scotts Arboretum with their radio-active green and other glowing hair colors.

Bob Griffin and KiraGoetschieus enjoy a study break in the Danawell trailer.

Hallowell was the dorm to live in if you were an avid slalom skier. To those who weren't, the halls were just plain annoying, though residents never had to live in fear of a riot. During Winter Break, new blue carpeting and brighter lights were installed in the hallways, and message boards were attached to each door. Inside the rooms, the brown motif remained, but Hallowell residents still had those huge bay windows that they could sit and enjoy bright light in.

Due to the housing crunch, Danawell lounges were converted into rooms and a trailer was constructed to serve as a lounge.

For information on the architecture of Dana, see previous article. No matter how much these two dorms looked like each other, however, the two dorms had distinctive personalities. The fact that each hall was made up of different kinds of people with different personalities, gave Dana a flavor unique from Hallowell. The fact that the dorm was home to the substance-free hall in the basement may have added to its image. No matter what the personality differences between the dorms, there were numerous perks to Danawell residency enjoyed by the inhabitants of both dorms. For no matter how brown the buildings may have been, there were always the big windows to sit in.

Making use of the only lounge in Hallowell, basement residents play a board game.

Mertz, schmertz

High atop the hill, the tallest point in Delaware County, Parrish marked the point where the dorm side of campus melted into the academic side of campus. A new hall was converted to dorm rooms due to the housing crunch, and what once was administrative offices became the home to the men of 2nd West. As a result, the CRC was converted into office space, and CIVIC groups were left without a home. This problem was solved by turning Sharples III, the mysterious building in between Olde Clube and Delta Upsilon, over to Interclub for the purpose of providing CIVIC groups with a place to meet. This new arrangement provided the residents of 2nd East with a unique opportunity to mingle with those who worked in the President's Office and other offices on the other half of their hall.

After unpacking, Corey Datz-Greenberg frolics in a box of foam peanuts.

Displaying their fluid gender identities, second floor residents prepare to leave for the Sager party.

Mary Lyons 2nd: Eric Frudman, Prachi Patankar, Jeremy Dilatush, Will McKintosh, Rachel McKnight, Snaford Devoe, Josh Silver, Jessica Howington, CoreyDatz-Greenberg, Jodi Sherman, Katrina Mergen, Massey Burke. Not Pictured: Maya Seligman, Carrie Bader, Gordon Roble, Seth Garber, Rachel Henighan, Rebecca Roth, Laurence Kerr, Cathy Polinsky, David Phillips, Alastair Thompson, Anne Potter, Joel McNary, Joe Robins, Michelle Worth, Lisa Triplett, Julia Hoviss, Carew Kraft, Raya Peelle, Sarah Piatt, Susan Lin, Aaron Friedman, Gabe Cumming, Sarah Benis.

To those who did not live there, Mary Lyon seemed mysterious and far away. There were some however, who, either because of the private bathrooms or the sense of dorm unity, chose to live there. There were many perks to living in ML. Where else on campus could you live and be able to go to breakfast in your pajamas? ML also provided residents a convenient place to dress for the Halloween party. Besides, when spring rolled around the walk to and from campus was an enjoyable way to relax after a long day.

Dressed all in black, Kim Gallup prepares to leave for a party.

Mary Lyons 3rd: Meredith Linn, Nick Gisonda, Alison Marsh, Joan Hoffman, AJ Ebrahim, Kevin Schlottman, Kate Baird, Cameron Warner, Massey Burke, Margaret Hutchins, Jen Koemer, Megan Kriegel, Amanda Lehman, Daniel Barolsky, Rumki Saha, Rebecca Green, Ian Bricke, Jeff Doyon, Scott Price, Anna Hess, Emily Mott, Beth Biller Not Pictured: Kim Gallup, Min-Kyung Kim, Rachel Goldman, Tannia Jauregui, Herrin Hopper, Greg Ingber, Victor Pineiro, Amalia Jenson, Channaly Oum, Stacey Beardon, Mary McMenomy

Focusing his energy, Tim Hunt prepares to hit a pinata hanging in the basement.

Playing a game of "Chubby Bunny", Kate Baird stuffs cotton balls in her mouth.

Being mauled by some Woolman residents, Brantly Bryant enjoys bringing a male presence to the dorm.

Woolman: Rachel Buurma, Leal Beck, Jennifer Chen, Sonja Shields, Courtney Harter, Hannah Teicher, Holly Barton, Sophia Kellman, Sunny Lee, Desiree Joseph, Melinda Yin, Danielle Sass, Thea Keith-Lucas, Christine Lee, Susan Stratton, Haejin Kim, Brantley Bryant

Providing entertainment, Lou Gehrig jams with his friend from Temple at the Woolman Fall pre-formal.

On the other side of the Dupont, on the way to the mall, was Woolman. The only single-sex dorm at Swarthmore, many women were deterred from living there by the fact that its location, on the other side of campus, made it seem even further off campus than Mary Lyon. The residents, however, enjoyed large windows, private bathrooms, and a unique sense of dorm identity. Even though Woolman was taken off the official shuttle route, making Woolman less accessible for some students, those who lived there enjoyed it.

At the Woolman pre-formal, a couple dances to a live jazz band in the lounge.

Sonja Shields and Thea Keith-Lucas stand in the entrance-way to Woolman.

Pittenger 2nd: Ben Wurgratt, Chuck Groom, Abram Hussbaum, Jerry Melichar, Daniel Littlewood, Neil DiMaio, David Moscovitz, Rachel Lynne, Sarah Wolfe, Robin Mandel, Yuhki Tajima, Morgan Kelly, Kate Schneider

PPR, otherwise known as Pittenger, Palmer, and Roberts, resembled the homes in the ville more than most of the dorms at Swarthmore. Though it was off-campus, PPR was still close enough that it was one of the most popular places to live. The palatial rooms and private bathrooms were inviting to many upperclasspeople, and there were several frosh in Pittenger lucky enough to get placed there.

Roberts: Matt Howard, Eric von Weitberg, Kristin Savicki, Jessica Smoler, Annie Bacon, Jen Lee, Will Nessley, Kimon Keramidas, Drew Stillman, John Levinsky, Miho Tsujii, Jeremy Peterson, Martine Carillo, Nick Saution, James Rice

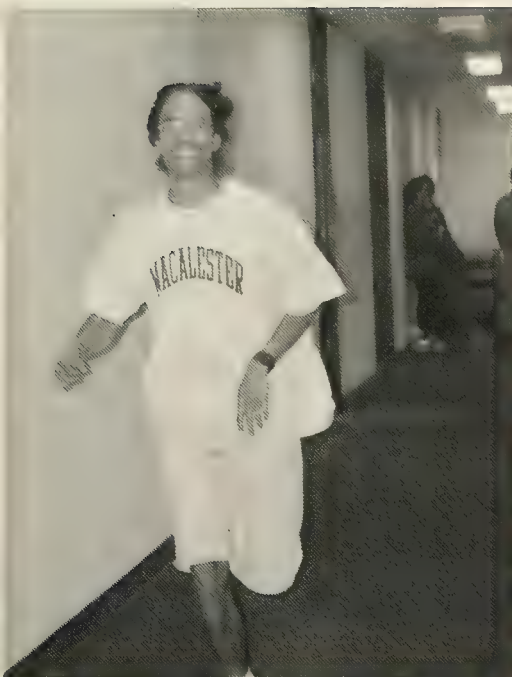

Enjoying the warm weather while it lasts, Jerahme Posner does his reading outside in the Wharton Courtyard.

Wharton was home to lucky frosh and people with high lottery numbers. Though many of the singles were described by some as "bowling alleys", it was still one of the most popular dorms come room choosing. Frosh who lived there had surprisingly large rooms, and they benefited from the large number of upperclasspeople who shared the hall with them. Located next to Tarble, Wharton was both convenient and aesthetically pleasing. When the weather was warm, the Wharton courtyard was crowded with students studying, and when it was snowing outside, the courtyard was beautiful to look at.

Wharton EF 2nd: Ian Chang, Todd Hedrick, Nini Khosrowshi, John Loser, Rodolph Boulanger, Joe Goodman, Demetri Bonaros, Alecia Magnifico, Lindsay Herron, Mellissa Kobelin, Caitlin Kennedy, Noel Goodin, Sam Gottlieb, Tim Jaeger.

Swarthmore Beware!!!!!!

We, the members of 3rd West are fed up with the administration's tyranny. We therefore are submitting a list of demands which, if not met by 9 a.m. on April 1st, will result in a complete and total revolution by our hall. Our demands are as follows:

- 1)Unlimited Tarble credit
- 2)Bring Father Smokey back to Sharples
- 3)Deans must be go-go dancers at all SAC-funded parties
- 4)In addition to the normal bars at Sharples, there must be "Bar Bar" where real drinks are served.
- 5)That Chairman Pan be installed as supreme commander of Swarthmore.
- 6)That we put one of those crazy-looking Kremlin domes on top of Parrish.
- 7)That economically superior and self sufficient independent public dorms of Parrish, Wharton and Danawell establish their own union apart from the inferior republics of mertz, worth, and willets.
- 8)All books without pictures in McCabe will be burned...All books in Cornell will be burned regardless.
- 9)Suynday night dinners at Sharples no longer suck. and most importantly
- 10)GRADE INFLATION NOW!!!!!!!!!!

My fellow Swatties, the comet has come, and the time for revolution is now.....TO THE BARRICADES!

si, pantalones.

here I lived with dan lurie and raina siladi, and sofie bechman and erika rauer and april chan and even gerald stanley karnas, and richard delgado and ron smith. i was in part responsible for introducing people to drugs, it was the way dan met me. hey dan, mind if i store acid in the freezer? and i grew away from it as the year wore on, making web pages and chasing chandra kreuzer.

raina. raina jo. raina siladi. first we were willistians, and then we once went running together. if you knew us as bumps in a bed watching kurosawa movies, to see us jogging in the crum would have made senese. we grew. we never fooled around, mind you, she liked my weird friends more than she liked me (in that way, right?)

dan and I had a study break for al bloom. dan was a genius for weird stuff, though not as striking/sociopathic as jerry, who was always on the verge of being a great leader of men. what's goin' ohn!

jerry mike genovese and i roadtripped tripped and played blackjack for shots. we were the closest thing to "gangstas" at swarthmore. it was reckless, oh, it was brave. i was the first member of KGB, the cool fraternity initiation, they thought they'd get me real trashed. i proceeded to regale mike, maud and jerry with graphic verbal celebration of eating out a menstruating woman. hah hah. they got what they deserved. so did i.

rally on, k&g.

were you away last semester?

fall 94, worked at wired/hotwired in san francisco.
fall 96, working with howard rheingold, who said swat reminded him of reed, with less drugs; and electric minds, in san francisco.
spring 97, i lived on p4w, parrish 4th west, with DU brothers and brother ethan devine, the harmonica playing irish muslim potter. unlike my other, delinquent ("marijuana achiever" - and he did, pulling down all a's in political science, so i heard) friends, ethan came in as a freshman, and on april 20, 1997, when I write this, he might double major and graduate in three years. and he still fools around on my radio show, with me and wilson, on the electric eclectic.

wilson Kello, unstoppable wilson. i sent amy squires, of mills college, some of his broccoli ode, which she forwarded to her friend eve, at NYU, and eve said, "wilson - pure chewing satisfaction." media!
we hosted poetry readings, radio shows, poetry tables (ode to any subject). he drew and i wrote some articles for my web site. we interviewed satan together. travelled to little five points, atlanta, there met moebius and the cute wig-salesgirl on sedatives. he's abrasive because he's always right. either that or he was wounded as a child. or he's angry that i interrupted him. forget it.

denise is a person people can't believe. so let them. cultural? psychological? how did i understand a girl who slept with a bra on to avoid breast-pencil-drop, or said she did? she moved into virtual san francisco, chatting on cyborganic's spacebar. in flux.

probably doesn't want me to say anything about her. or at least that's what she'd say. i imagine.

i am still "like a blinded horse" but now with something to show for it:
<http://www.justin.org/>

martín carrillo, benjamin ryerson rutter: later roommates, martín sung andean folk songs as i fell to sleep - post-wired, obsessed, not yet met wilson, just barely beginning becky. it was romantic. he was often fraught. that was in roberts, only one semester i lived there, with justin paulson as well. exposure to young male leftist passionate living. i spoke the summer after at the rand corporation. this is when my web site, and justin's web site, were each breaking the scs servers (mine with sex links, his with ezln updates and smuggled mexican newspapers) ya basta!

where's your toolbelt?

it was in my car when it was stolen last semester.

fall semester 1995, and spring semester 1996, ben, and by extension, ned small, and i lived together in worth.

i had a big room because id agreed to live with kylian robinson, but he didn't return. i mean i had a huge room. i hung a table cloth on the ceiling. i had a couch, and a table, and four chairs. second semester, i made web pages every night. ben was really fun to live with. he sang, operatic, things like, "you're totally ridiculous," and "where's the knife for the peanut butter." he did fierce imitations of folks we knew, but never on demand.

freshman year, i thought i was so bad, i hung out with the psychological services' rejects, they shared mental home stories, cheap cigarettes and appropriate fakable symptoms to be prescribed xanax. i thought everyone at swarthmore was that messed up. i was wrong. they left. they encouraged eachother. no group of alienated has emerged so prevalently since kurt, betsy, alex, damen, amy, jake left. they were smart. they made me hate myself.

sinners stands for "swarthmore internet novices & experts rhythmic seminar" weekend sessions started in february 1995 to encourage community use of web publishing.

other times.

Yonathan Desselagn, Dominic Sagolla, J. Carew Kraft, Denise Tenorio, J. Wilson Kello, Aisha Hobbs, Andrea Johnson, Balthazar Alessandri, Nate Mason, Sasha Welsh, Liz O'Malley (year #s omitted to blur chronology)

here is a photo large enough, i hope, with enough people in it, both familiar and less, to encourage identification by all parties that enjoyed or didn't a night or three in worth III, during my tenancy.

balthazar pioneered the social uses of technology in ways invasive and disquieting to most of swarthmore. his presence or not each semester was a struggle. his endless macho trumpeting of marxism seemed intimately tied to his wish for a free-love state.

rya did have magic powers - the inscrutable ability to derail and distract masculinist discourse. she was he most berkley among us. impermanent artist.

April is an accomplished weirdo. she's met people weirder than her and emerged relatively unscarred. she liked to scar me. i think i kept a certain distance from her after that night. i mean i stayed because i was curious and i was her friend but i wasn't going back in for more of that. at least not physically. verbally, its unavoidable.

ju-bu bead finger

there's yoni, yonathan, who may never have ended up with his own swarthmore yearbook page. yoni was ever-present. generations of swatties enjoyed his comraderee, and brave attempts to compleat 9 credits in one semester and finally quit cigarettes.

Dom, inic sagolla. played his guiter. threw the i ching. helped with sinners. graduated on time, took a job with a big company and wondered a little whether it was the empire, as opposed to the rebellion. consecrated sci fi as "the new mythology," moved his dom.net to cyborganic. what didn't i say? i struggled with dominic, but only with myself. why am i writing this here? forget it.

Becky, spirklin, never did your sweet sexy spirit fail me, except when you got angry with me for seemingly slight offenses and wouldn't talk to me for weeks and id almost forget until youd rub your enthusiasm and sparkfire up against mine and whoa boy. too much for the yearbook.

what happened to your hands?

repetative stress injury, from too much computing. actually. tenosynovitis.

Carew, conscious consumer, irrevocable activist but strangely mutable for so much drive. i mean at once impressionable, or soaking, but underlying? confrontational, almost more aggressive than me. made for great late dynamique - we went to see terance mckenna together and made beautiful ideas. was i sometimes like her father and she my spite? at its worst. othertimes were intuitive partnership and just inspiration. she did things.

AN ODE TO ESTHER SHARYN ROSENBAUM

How swiftly the years have flown as from childhood to adulthood you have grown!
Those years when we watched with joy
the way you learned as you used each toy;
The pretty pieces your hands did fashion
from pins and beads and colored sashes.
Eagerly you learned on the piano to play
In costumes you posed and happily danced away.
Learning and debating you pursued with pleasure;
how goodly are your attributes, dear Esther.
Mom, Dad and Grandma are proud and blessed;
with your talents and skills
you should pass all life's tests.

CONGRATULATIONS, KRISTEN!

We tried to find a poem for you,
One that would celebrate your love
Of family and of friends,
Your love of teaching,
Your achievements, your bubbling spirit,
Your beauty,
And our love of you.
But that poem isn't written,
So this will have to do.

*To laugh often and love much; to win the respect of intelligent persons and the affections of children; to earn the approbation of honest critics and endure the betrayal of false friends; to appreciate beauty; to find the best in others; to give one's self; to leave the world a bit better, whether by a healthy child, a garden patch, or a redeemed social condition; to have played and laughed with enthusiasm, and sung with exultation; to know even one life has breathed easier because you have lived -
This Is To Have Succeeded.
